How do I behave
when the law is contrary to Christian values?

CONNECTING POINT

👤 John Kovacik, FOP RCIA Coordinator - St. Isidore 📧 rcia@stisidore.church

Does it feel like an obstacle course sometimes? Or like we are navigating some kind of quest? We attend Mass together as a Catholic community and then take the Word of God out into the secular world. "Spread the Good News!" "Live as a joyful missionary disciple!" But what happens when a law or a work "rule" is contrary to our Christian values? Jesus gives us the answer in this week's Gospel.

"Whose image is this and whose inscription?" They replied, "Caesar's." At that he said to them, "Then repay to Caesar what belongs to Caesar and to God what belongs to God" (Mt 22: 15-21).

In the Gospel, Jesus is questioned by the Pharisees about paying taxes to the Roman Emperor. Jesus immediately detects that they are trying to entrap him. The Pharisees ask him, "Is it lawful to pay the census tax to Caesar or not?" Jesus knows if he says "Yes" he will appear to be a Roman sympathizer and will be discredited in the eyes

► Congratulations to our Jubilarians

Family Ministry |  Chris Piebiak, Director  chrisp@stol.church

The Jubilarian Mass takes place every year to celebrate couples who have reached milestones in their marriage and remind them of the love of God and the covenant between them and God. It is always a joy to recognize couples who have been in their marriages for five years and beyond; it is a great accomplishment. We know it involves hard work and commitment to God in solving problems and raising children. At St. Therese, we want to celebrate all that sacrifice, all that love, and, most important, the fact that God is still with us.

A special thank you to the Marriage Ministry team for organizing this Mass every year. If you are celebrating a milestone anniversary next year, please join us!

The Mystery of the Eucharist

As Catholics, we know the Holy Eucharist is the most important part of the Mass. Many of us have had questions about its significance and how it continues to unite us with Christ. It is the most beautiful gift we have been given from the Lord. During the next few weeks, Fish Tales will take a close look at the Mystery of the Eucharist. Dr. Edward Sri, a theologian, author, and well-known Catholic speaker will help us to understand this mystery in his book, Behold the Lamb God. We will present a summary of his interesting research and findings.

John 4:8 tells us that God is Love, and He wants to remain intimately involved in our lives. He wants us to grow in relationship with Him, so He gives us his most precious gift: His Body and Blood in the Eucharist. Dr. Sri refers to it as the “source and summit of our Christian Life,” citing it from the Second Vatican Council, Lumen Gentium.

I AM HERE is a campaign by the Archdiocese of Detroit and Hallow App in support of the National Eucharistic Revival.

► Kids Coalition Against Hunger

👤 Chris Kozlowski, Mission Support Director ✉ chrisk@stol.church

Kids Coalition Against Hunger (KCAH) is a non-profit organization committed to alleviating childhood hunger on a global scale. Established in 1998, KCAH has been a beacon of hope for countless children, families, and communities. The organization's mission is simple yet profound: to feed starving children and hungry families, both in the United States and around the world.

KCAH's strategy is centered around packing nutritious, life-saving meals. These meals are carefully formulated to provide essential nutrients to malnourished children and families.

The organization's volunteers and partners work tirelessly to assemble and distribute these meals to those in need. This hands-on approach ensures that the help reaches those who need it most.

Donating to KCAH is a powerful and effective way to make an impact on childhood hunger. Your financial support allows KCAH to purchase the necessary ingredients, transport the meals to vulnerable communities, and continue their mission to fight hunger.

Our Family of Parishes is hosting a food packing event at St. Isidore on November 11 and your donations will determine how many hungry children we'll be able to feed this year. A gift of $100 would provide roughly 285 meals, but any gift that is offered is appreciated. Our goal is to pack 100,000 meals, but the actual number will be determined by your generosity.

Please prayerfully consider a gift to this amazing project and help us to provide at least 100,000 meals for those in need.

Donate today and volunteer to pack meals on Nov. 11 at

of many. However, if he says "No," he will be reported to the authorities for instigating a tax revolt.

What does Jesus do? He teaches two important lessons. First, by stating "to repay to Caesar what belongs to Cesar and to God what belongs to God," he teaches us that political and religious obligations can, at many times, be legitimately met. But what if they conflict? Jesus gives us the answer when he asks what it is that "belongs to God." It is the human person! Our highest obligation in life is to follow and give ourselves back to our Lord.

It's easier said than done—to live your Catholic beliefs at all times. But that is what we are called and challenged to do. Not just on Sundays, but each and every day. When we are confronted with a situation where it appears our Christian morals are challenged by a law, ask yourself: Will my response/actions be pleasing to the Lord? The world asks for money, but God asks for your heart.

RAMBLING ROSES CHRISTMAS PARTY

If you are a paid member of Rambling Roses and need a ticket for our Christmas Party at Crank's on Dec. 7, please contact Shirley Jachcik at (586) 842-8944 by Nov. 27. Each ticket costs $25/person.

► Walking the Path

Discipleship Formation |  Peggy Casing, D.F. Director  peggyc@stol.church

In a continuation of our conversation about sacramental readiness, I'd just like to finish up by addressing the confusion I've seen from folks who have lived in a different diocese, or two, around the United States or abroad. They often ask why there are different timetables and procedures regarding the preparation for sacraments. As I said before, a bishop determines the proper age for celebration of sacraments within his (arch)diocese, as long as those standards fall within Canon Law and the rubrics of the rites themselves. The difference, however, lies in the fact that these texts often provide "wiggle room" that allow for different interpretation or different choices for implementation. What?! Wiggle room? Different interpretation? How can that be? Aren't we a Church founded on structure and rules? Doesn't this mean the Church should tighten up those "rules" so we are all in full lockstep? Well... before you get upset, consider our current situation: Currently, we belong to a worldwide Church where there is great disparity in opportunities for formation, distances traveled for Mass, and more. The wiggle room allows a bishop to address the particular needs of the people of his (arch) diocese. Consider, also, the future: It is a future that will pose situations that we aren't used to. Americans residing in the Midwest or Northeast Coast are used to sacraments, pretty much, on demand. Even as we begin to feel the effects of our looming priest shortage, the opportunities for the celebration of sacraments are likely to change. Those changes may mean that a sacrament may be more dependent on the availability of a presider rather than the age of the recipient. We can't forget, however, that there are places in the world where Mass attendance is booming, and their communities are facing very different growing pains, with Catholic communities where none had been before. Whether facing issues of the present, or the future, it helps to remember that the Church has seen over two-thousand years of ebb and flow.

As I said before, some of the disparity we see is based on a bishop's understanding of his people and their particular circumstances. For example, cultural norms can influence the decisions that are made. If families are accustomed to a very brief courtship, for example, the bishop may feel that a brief marriage preparation process is all that he is able to expect. His experience, with the people of the area, tells him that if he were to implement a six-month process, like we have in our archdiocese, couples would just opt out of a church ceremony. With a desire for couples to have the opportunity and desire to celebrate the Sacrament of Marriage in the Church, he implements a brief preparation process. At other times, the availability of resources and staffing mean that formation is brief or the Sacraments of Initiation are celebrated together (Baptism, Confirmation, and Eucharist). While it might feel like these "practical" situations shouldn't influence the preparation for, and celebration of, these "spiritual and Godly" events, they have to. They have to because sacraments are conferred upon humans, and humans weren't made to fit into a perfect mold. They have to because we'd rather be able to provide the opportunity for a sacrament, even if that means that the preparation is different than what we deem to be ideal or the ages of the recipients aren't all the same. There is wisdom and grace in allowing for this flexibility.

As for our Church in the future, get ready to see creative solutions for shifting populations and the reality that we can't work our priests like dogs and expect the Church to flourish. Population shifts, including those that see a diminishment in one region and a rise in another, aren't new to the Church, even though they feel new to us. Those shifts mean change, variety, and nimbleness. While holding onto what is non-negotiable, and allowing for creativity and diversity elsewhere, it is helpful to remember that meeting people "where they are" has been modeled for us from the start. Just like Jesus, who went out to the people—eating with them, performing miracles upon them, teaching and praying with them—we are asked to step outside the doors to our buildings and walk with others, embracing the messiness of life. Cookie cutters and shoehorns can't be part of our equipment if we want to accompany people like Jesus did.

► Shingles

Health Ministry | 👤 Marilyn Cito, Parish Nurse 📧 marilync@stol.church

Shingles is a disease caused by the varicella-zoster virus—the same virus that causes chickenpox. Anyone who's had chickenpox may develop shingles. After you've had chickenpox, the virus lies inactive in nerve tissue near your spinal cord and brain. Years later, the virus may reactivate as shingles, but not everyone who has had chickenpox will develop shingles. The reason for shingles is unclear. Shingles is more common in people who have weakened immune systems and in older adults, which might be due to a lowered immunity to infections as you grow older. Factors that may increase your chances of getting shingles include being over 50, having certain diseases that weaken your immune system, undergoing cancer treatments, and taking certain medications, such as prednisone.

You cannot get shingles from someone who has shingles. You can get chickenpox from someone who has shingles if you have never had chickenpox or have never received the chickenpox vaccine. If you've had shingles once, you probably won't get it again, but that doesn't mean it can't happen. However, you can take steps to help prevent it or ease it the next time around.

Shingles is a viral infection that causes a painful rash. The rash often appears as a cluster of fluid-filled blisters. Although shingles can occur anywhere on your body, it most often appears as a single strip of blisters that wraps around either the left or right side of your torso. The next most common location is on one side of the forehead or around one eye.

Shingles usually starts out as a tingling pain, followed by a burning feeling, red rash, blistering, and finally with the blistering crusting over. You may also experience a fever, chills, headache, raised dots or redness on the skin, itching, stabbing or shooting pain in a localized area, and general weakness. Typically, a rash develops 1-5 days after you feel numbness or tingling pain. If you have shingles, you are contagious until the last blister has scabbed over, which is usually 10-14 days.

If you develop shingles, it is important to contact your doctor or healthcare provider at the first sign so he/she can decide on a treatment plan which may include ordering an antiviral medication such as acyclovir. These medicines are most effective when taken as soon as possible after the rash appears.

Many people are able to manage the pain with over-the-counter pain medications. Getting treated early can help shingles go away faster and may help you avoid related problems. Shingles on the face can cause hearing or sight problems, including blindness. Early treatment can also help prevent or ease pain, including pain that lasts after the rash is gone, called post-herpetic neuralgia. If left untreated, some complications of shingles can be fatal. Pneumonia, encephalitis, stroke, and bacterial infections can cause your body to go into shock or sepsis.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends healthy adults 50 years and older get the shingles vaccine whether or not they remember having chickenpox. Even if you have had shingles, the CDC recommends getting the vaccine, since it can help prevent future occurrences of the disease. The shingles vaccine doesn't guarantee that you won't get shingles, but it will reduce the severity of the disease and reduce your risk of post-herpetic neuralgia.

In the United States, Shingrix is the preferred vaccine and was approved by the FDA in 2017. Shingrix is a nonliving vaccine made of a virus component and is given in two doses, with two to six months between doses. Shingrix is approved and recommended for people ages 50 and older, including those who have previously received Zostavax or had shingles. The Shingrix vaccine has proven to be 97% effective in preventing shingles in adults 50-69 years old, and 91% effective in those 70 years and older.

Side effects from getting the shingles vaccine may include a sore arm with mild or moderate pain, redness, and swelling where you received the shot. Some people may feel tired, have muscle pain, headaches, shivering, fever, stomach pain, or nausea. If you do experience any side effects, most go away in 2-3 days.

The vaccine is available in doctor's offices and pharmacies and may be covered by your insurance.

► Teen Ministry

As part of our commitment to better serve our youth, we are re-evaluating and charting a new course for our youth ministry program. As we develop a new and improved program, we welcome teens who are interested in participating and adults who would like to be part of our ground breaking team, to contact our Director of Family Ministry, Chris Piebiak at (586) 254-4433 or chrisp@stol.church.

► Adopt-a-Family/ Foster Child for Christmas

 John Karski, Director of Evangelical Charity
 johnk@stol.church

Our Parish Adopt-a-Family/Foster Child Program makes it possible for the struggling families and foster children in our area to have a magical Christmas and experience the light of Christ. This program is only possible through the generosity of people like you—people willing to open their hearts and provide the resources necessary to make Christmas possible for those who are less fortunate.

We match individual or group sponsors with a family/foster child who has experienced circumstances which have made it difficult or impossible for the caregivers to provide Christmas for the family/foster child. To make your shopping easier, information on family/foster child needs (clothing, gifts, etc.) will be provided.

Would you or your family, school group, co-workers, business, or organization like to help give a joyful Christmas to local families/foster children who would otherwise have nothing on Christmas? If so, please contact John Karski at (586) 254-4433 x302.

If you would like to sponsor or give a monetary donation, please contact John Karski no later than November 15, so we know how many families/foster children we can help.
