CONNECTING POINT

👤 Peggy Casing, Director of Discipleship Formation ✉ peggyc@stol.church

I remember the collective gasp, even if not audible, when the world first heard about St. Mother Teresa's "dark night," a fifty-year period of feeling God's absence from her life. Some said that the book Mother Teresa: Come Be My Light: The Private Writings of the "Saint of Calcutta" shouldn't be published.

As a matter of fact, she herself had asked for the writings to be destroyed upon her death, likely because of a fear that these letters and other private writings might bring doubt to others. In the end, we can never know the full effect of the book's publication, but we do know that the book reveals that doubt is a very human condition with the ability to affect almost anyone.

In our scripture readings for today, Thomas refuses to believe in the Resurrection until he sees Jesus with his own eyes. Once he does, his doubt disappears. Our maxim for the week, “no doubt,” reflects the moment when Thomas moves from skepticism to a firm declaration of “My Lord and my God!” What a blessing! Thomas gets firm proof of Jesus’ Resurrection by seeing the evidence for himself. Jesus knows, however, that many disciples will have to believe without seeing for themselves. He goes on to say, “Blessed are those who have not seen and have believed.” These words serve as our call to cast doubt aside and hold firm to our belief in Jesus for our sake and the sake of our community.

It is this communal aspect of faith that served as one of the reasons that, while St. Mother Teresa didn’t want her writings to outlive her, the Vatican wanted them preserved. They saw how her perseverance through the dark night of her soul models the hanging on, trusting, and forging ahead that we are all called to at different times in our lives. Furthermore, her life also affirms for us, on this Divine Mercy Sunday (and always), that God’s mercy and love can work through us, even when we feel like life is uncertain.

Just as St. Mother Teresa and other committed Christians serve as role models for us, it is good to remember that we can also be models of faith for others. On our strong days, we carry others along on our shoulders. On days when we falter, we grab the hands of our brothers and sisters of faith, allowing them to lift us up. Together, may our collective demonstration and witness of faith in Jesus proclaim “No doubt!” in our skeptical world today.

Divine Mercy Sunday

Psalm 118 begins, "Give thanks to the Lord, for He is good; His mercy endures forever."

Today, on Divine Mercy Sunday, let us accept God's invitation to celebrate and practice mercy. The great sacrament in the Church, Reconciliation, is a profound demonstration of His unfathomable mercy for each one of us. We are able to pay forward that mercy to others by our prayers for them, by corporal and spiritual works of mercy, and, hopefully, by the mercy and forgiveness we show to others who have wronged us in some way.

As we meditate in gratitude for God's gracious mercy shown to us, we should look honestly at the mercy we show to others.

There is a beautiful prayer that St. Faustina gave us: Eternal God, in whom mercy is endless and the treasury of compassion inexhaustible, look kindly upon us. We humbly implore your mercy for ourselves, our loved ones, and for the whole world. Grant us strength to overcome our weaknesses and to trust in your unfailing love. May your mercy be a shield against all evil and a source of hope in times of despair. Through the sorrowful Passion of your Son, Jesus Christ, have mercy on us and upon the whole world. Amen.

► Chronic Kidney Disease

👤 Marilyn Cito 📧 marilync@stol.church

Chronic kidney disease is the gradual loss of kidney function. Normally, the kidneys filter wastes and excess fluids from the blood and eliminate them in the urine, but with advanced kidney disease, these wastes and fluids can build up in the body.

Chronic kidney disease can occur when diseases such as diabetes, high blood pressure, inflammation or infections of the kidneys, or other kidney-related conditions damage the kidneys. Other factors that may increase your risk of chronic kidney disease include high blood pressure, smoking, obesity, family history, abnormal kidney structure, or being of older age. If you have any of these conditions, it is important to see your doctor regularly to monitor your health. Prevention is the best strategy to reduce the risk of developing kidney disease. Follow over-the-counter medication instructions, don't smoke, and watch your weight.

Signs and symptoms of chronic kidney disease usually develop over some time and may be nonspecific because the kidneys are adaptable and able to compensate for lost function. Symptoms may not be recognized until damage has occurred, so it is important to consult with your doctor or healthcare provider if you experience any of these symptoms:

- Nausea, vomiting, loss of appetite
- Tiredness, weakness, sleep problems
- Changes in how much you urinate
- Swelling of feet, shortness of breath, chest pain
- Muscle cramps/itching
- High blood pressure

Treatment for chronic kidney disease focuses on slowing the progression of kidney damage, usually by controlling the underlying cause. Chronic kidney disease can progress to end-stage kidney failure, which could be fatal without artificial filtering (dialysis) or a kidney transplant.

St. Therese of Lisieux will host a presentation on kidney disease by Victoria Laurenzi-Jump of Greenfield

Health Services on Thursday, May 1, from 12 to 1 PM in the Social Hall following the Rambling Roses meeting. Topics will include signs, symptoms, and treatments for kidney disease, strategies for managing daily activities and preventing complications, understanding fluid and dietary restrictions, dialysis, and other relevant information about kidney disease.
