30TH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

CONNECTING POINT

Matt Kush, Director of Engagement matt@stisidore.church

In this Sunday's Gospel, Jesus puts loving God and our neighbors at the center of everything. It sounds simple enough, but we need to remember something important about that word, neighbor: It doesn't just mean the people we like, get along with, or enjoy spending time with. It also includes people we may find difficult to love.

Most of us have probably heard (or said) the familiar line, "You don't have to like someone (perhaps a sibling), but you have to love them." We often tell children this, but I think adults could use a reminder every now and then, too. After all, it's pretty easy to love people who are easy to love, but what about the person who cuts you off in traffic, jumps ahead of you in line, or takes forever when you're already running late? What about someone who

Matt Kush, Director of Engagement matt@stisidore.church

Who is God challenging me to love more intentionally?

doesn't do things the way you think they should, sits in "your" pew at church, or never misses a chance to tell you why your political opinions are wrong? Yep. Jesus is talking about those people, too.

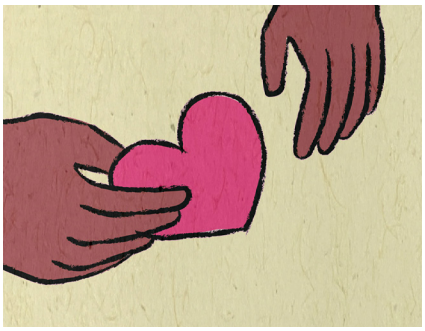

So, how do we actually love them? First, I think we need to recognize that it's perfectly okay to get frustrated or annoyed! We're human. We have emotions, opinions, preferences, and, sometimes, very little patience. However, it's in what we do after that initial reaction that gives our faith a chance to make a difference.

We may not be able to stop ourselves from feeling annoyed, but we can choose what we do with that feeling. Sometimes, all it takes is a few seconds to interrupt our usual response, take a deep breath, and say a quick prayer, even something as simple as, "Lord, help me see this person through Your eyes." It doesn't have to be complicated or take more than a few seconds—just enough time to remind ourselves that the person frustrating us is also someone God loves.

Now, I want you to think of one person in your life who regularly bothers or annoys you. Maybe it's someone at work, a neighbor, a family member, or someone you see at church. Chances are that a name or face came to mind pretty quickly. Here's where I think our Connecting Point becomes especially important: It's asking us to love more intentionally. And that means doing more than simply praying, "God, please give me the patience to deal with this person today!"

The next time you see that person, start with a genuine smile and a friendly "Good morning!" Ask them how they're doing, and actually listen to the answer. If you know something about their life, ask about their children, how their weekend went, or whether they watched the Lions game. If you don't know them very well, start with something simple. Better yet, find something you can genuinely compliment them on. We all know how good it feels when someone notices something about our hair, what we're wearing, or something we did well, and offers a kind word. Even the smallest comments can make a difference in someone's day.

And here's the thing: You don't have to suddenly become best friends with someone to show them love. You don't even have to agree with them. You just have to choose to treat them with the same kindness and respect you would hope to receive—that's what it means to be intentional. It's choosing kindness when being annoyed would be easier. It's making an effort when we'd rather avoid someone. It's remembering that loving our neighbor isn't just something we're supposed to believe in; it's something we're supposed to do.

You might be surprised by what happens when you try. Those small gestures can have a twofold effect: They might brighten someone else's day and change your attitude toward that person. Over time, someone who once seemed like a constant source of frustration might become a little easier to understand, appreciate, and, yes, even love. So, this week, think about that one person who came to mind earlier. Don't just ask God for the patience to put up with them; ask for help finding one small way to show them love.

Blessed Fulton Sheen's Words of Wisdom

Throughout Bishop Sheen's long career as a public speaker, he imparted much wisdom. These are a few of his famous quotes.

"When you pray, do not do all the talking! Listen! We are impolite when we pray, chattering and mumbling all the time but never giving God a chance to get a word in edgewise."

"God will not save our skin, but He will do everything to save our souls."

"Like a piece of iron to the magnet, I was drawn to [the Blessed Virgin Mary] before I knew her, but never drawn to her without Christ."

"There is always hope for the man who knows that he is doing wrong, but there is no hope for the man who, in doing wrong, calls the wrong right."

Informative and Inspirational

Over the past few years, I've been sending parents and other interested individuals three short videos and/or other content each month. The idea behind these emails is to share information or inspiration about the Church, sacraments, liturgy, or anything else related to Catholic living. For example, I shared a video of a parish performing their Living Stations of the Cross outdoors, another on understanding the bible, and another of a tour of the papal apartment in the Vatican complex. In effect, I'm doing the searching and the curating, so you'll receive a quick dose of Catholic content to enjoy. I try to keep the videos at about ten minutes or less. Please reach out to me if you would like to be placed on our tri-monthly (1st, 11th, and 22nd of each month) email distribution list. I'd love to include you. Contact me at Peggyc@stol.church or 586-254-2944 to hop on board!

Book Club at St. Therese

All are welcome to join us for our monthly book discussions on the third Thursday of each month (September through November and January through May). Consider joining us at 9:30 AM on November 19 to discuss Christmas Bells: A Novel by Jennifer Chiaverini. Contact Peggy Casing (peggyc@stol.church or 586-254-2944) for more information.

Health Ministry: Aortic Dissection

Marilyn Cito, Parish Nurse marilync@stol.church

Earlier this year, Senator Lindsey Graham passed away from an aortic dissection due to arteriosclerotic cardiovascular disease. Although aortic dissections are not very common, they are often fatal. John Ritter, Alan Thicke, and Lucille Ball also died from aortic dissections, which can occur with little warning and may be fatal within hours.

An aortic dissection is a tear in the inner layer of the aorta, the largest artery in the body. Blood rushes through the tear, splitting the artery's inner and middle layers. If the blood goes outside of the artery, it can cause organ damage, stroke, aortic regurgitation, tamponade, and often death.

An aortic dissection is caused by a weakened area in the aorta's wall and is divided into two groups, depending on which part of the aorta is affected:

- Type A: This (more common and dangerous) type involves a tear in the part of the aorta where it exits the heart. The tear can also happen in the upper (ascending) aorta and spread into the stomach area.
- Type B: This type involves a tear only in the lower (descending) aorta and may also spread into the stomach area.

Aortic dissections usually happen to men in their 60s and 70s. Symptoms of the dissection may resemble those of other health conditions and often delay diagnosis. An aortic dissection may feel like a heart attack, another heart condition, or like something is tearing or ripping. Symptoms may include sudden severe chest or upper back pain that spreads to the neck or back; sudden severe stomach pain; loss of consciousness; shortness of breath; symptoms like those of a stroke, including sudden vision problems, trouble speaking and walking, and weakness or loss of movement on one side of the body; and leg pain. Early diagnosis and fast treatment of aortic dissection greatly improve the chance of survival.

Risk factors include:

- High blood pressure (hypertension)
- Buildup of fats, cholesterol, and other substances in/on the artery walls (atherosclerosis)
- A bulge in the wall of the body's main artery (aortic aneurysm)
- An aortic valve with two flaps instead of three (bicuspid aortic valve)
- Narrowing of the aorta at birth (aortic coarctation)
- Certain genetic diseases (Turner syndrome, Marfan syndrome, and other connective tissue disorders)
- Inflammation of the arteries (arteritis)
- Cocaine use
- Pregnancy
- Intense weightlifting

You can lower your risk of an aortic dissection by preventing chest injury and taking steps to keep your heart healthy, which include managing your blood pressure, blood sugar, and cholesterol; not smoking; eating a healthy diet; staying active; managing your weight; getting enough sleep; and wearing a seat belt while driving (lowers the risk of chest injury during a car accident).

If you have a family history of aortic dissection, a connective tissue disorder, or a bicuspid aortic valve, make your doctor aware of that. If you have a genetic condition that raises your risk of aortic dissection, your doctor may recommend medications, even if your blood pressure is healthy. If you have an aortic aneurysm, find out how often you need checkups and if surgery is needed to repair it.

K of C Coats for Kids

Paul Bieber, K of C Representative

The Knights of Columbus are collecting coats to help families struggling to keep their children warm this winter. A box in the Gathering Space is available for you to place your clean, gently used, or brand-new coats and jackets in all sizes, from toddlers to high schoolers. The coat drive will last until November 15. Then, the donated coats will be taken to the Capuchin Service Center in Detroit and given to kids, who will be very thankful to receive them. You have been very generous in past years. Please help kids stay warm again this year.

Help a Family or Foster Child for Christmas

John Karski, Director of Evangelical Charity johnk@stol.church

Would you or your family, school group, coworkers, business, or organization like to help bring joy to local families and foster children who might otherwise have nothing for Christmas?

Our parish Adopt-a-Family/Foster Child program allows struggling families and foster children in our area to have a magical Christmas and experience the light of Christ.

We match individual or group sponsors with a family or foster child who has experienced circumstances that have made it difficult or impossible for the caregivers to provide Christmas for them. We will provide information on the family or foster child's needs (clothing, gifts, etc.). You may also assist by giving a financial donation to the program.

If so, please contact John Karski at his Parish Office number: 586-254-4433 Ext. 302.

We pray for the sick

Prayer for Archdiocesan Restructuring

Come, Holy Spirit.
Make your presence known as we restructure the parishes and ministries of our Archdiocese.

Be our light on the path we walk together.
Help us hear your voice
in the quiet of our own hearts,
in the wisdom of others,
and in the world around us.

We know you are with us
in every step of the process.
Give us clarity, understanding, and direction.
In all things, help us share the light of your love.
Amen.

St. Anne, pray for us.
Blessed Solanus Casey, pray for us.
Mary, Mother of the Church, pray for us.
